

KING'S COLLEGE

WILKES-BARRE, PENNSYLVANIA

Finance

Have you ever walked into a restaurant and noticed that the proprietors have the first dollar they ever earned framed on the wall? To the owner of this business, this single dollar not only represents their accomplishment of opening their own business but it also shows that the business is a success—they made money.

While owning a profitable business is a great way to make money, did you know there are numerous other ways to do it? Whether you're interested in becoming a trader on Wall Street, a stock market guru or aspire to become the next Donald Trump, King's has the faculty and resources to help you achieve your career goals.

Finance Today

As a finance major at King's, you will gain a thorough understanding of financial management and acquire solid business and communication skills by taking courses in the William G. McGowan School of Business. The McGowan School of Business, which is one of only 48 undergraduate schools of business in the country accredited by AACSB International - The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business, will prepare you to face the challenges of today's global business environment.

"The responsibilities that financial executives face today are quite extensive," explains Barry Williams, chairperson of the finance department. "As a financial administrator, you may find yourself in a position where your decisions will have a dramatic impact on the operations of an entire company."
